There is the place where the story began:
Patrimony in Malaysia: Mulu Cave, Sarawak

Mulu Cave is about 100 km from Miri in the far north of Sarawak. It is this amazing compact area of 544 square kilometres.

It is full of fascinating limestone structures and is one of the most extensive limestone cave systems on Earth.

Day to day, many people came to Mulu Cave to watch the beautiful scenery of the cave and also flora and fauna.
Inside the cave, here are the longest cave system in South East Asia (Cheow Lan Cave) and world’s longest cave passage (Beer Cave)

Mulu Cave is home to nearly 1500 species of flowering plants, also species for mammals, birds, bat species, and hundreds of cave-limited creatures.

Sometimes, archaeologists and scientists come to Mulu Cave to make investigation and make research about the cave.

At the town, businesswoman salary was down and they need to explore and get more raw materials to overcome the problems.
So they decided to explore Nygu Cave to get raw materials such as bird nest and wood.

Now, people start making destruction. They destroy and take everything to get what they want.

Sometimes, they saw the animals in the cave when they took the bird nest and other limestone there.

It is worse when they build some factories near the cave.

When rain turns heavy, the place becomes dirty and rubbish scatters everywhere. The land becomes muddy.

And now, tourists and villagers there are rarely come to Kinabalu. Cave as the place becomes very bad.

One day, tourists came at 8:45 a.m. and saw what had happened there.

They saw rubbish scatters everywhere and thus it emits the foul smell.
