square in the center and four streets extending to the four directions” (Page 38), and “the religious buildings of Baisha include the Glazed Hall, Dabaojigong Palace, Dading Pavilion, Hall of Vajra, and Wenchang Palace” (Page 43). As a result, the housing cluster and the religious buildings along the major axis running from south to north are defined as the property area, while the farmland, villages, mountains and water systems in the surrounding areas are included into the buffer zone.

(1) The property area of Baisha Housing Cluster reaches Wenchang Palace in the east, the western bank of Black Dragon River in the west, Baisha Village Committee in the south, and Hall of Vajra in the north, covering an area of 21 hectares.

(2) The buffer zone of Baisha Housing Cluster reaches Shubai Road and Taiping Village in the east, the ridge of Phoenix Mountain in the west, south side of Zhongyi Village in the south, and south side of Fengle Village in the north, covering an area of 85 hectares.

3. Shuhe Housing Cluster

When Shuhe Housing Cluster was enlisted as World Heritage, there were no defined property area and buffer zone. In this proposal of modification to the
