Celebrating 40 years... and looking forward to the next 40!

The year 2012 marked the 40th anniversary of the Convention concerning the Protection of the World Cultural and Natural Heritage. Since its adoption at the UNESCO General Conference on 16 November 1972, the Convention has developed into one of the most universally supported and recognized international treaties. As of April 2013, there were 190 signatories to the Convention, and a total of 962 properties inscribed on the World Heritage List.

The 40th anniversary of the adoption of the Convention was an occasion to celebrate the success of this international initiative. Beginning at the World Heritage General Assembly in November 2011, the anniversary was celebrated throughout 2012 through various events at international, regional, national and local levels.

The theme World Heritage and Sustainable Development: the Role of Local Communities was chosen by the World Heritage Committee as focus of the celebratory year. This reflects the emerging concern that the relationship between economic and social development and the involvement of local people is increasingly crucial to the protection of natural and cultural heritage. Many of the events throughout the year reflected on this issue.

The anniversary was also a timely occasion to look back on the path taken by the Convention, to take stock of its fruits and to assess concerns about its future. At the age of 40, is its credibility in danger? Is there any lost ground that we need to recover?

In his presentation at the Closing Event of the 40th anniversary celebrations, Kishore Rao, Director of the World Heritage Centre, affirmed his conviction that the World Heritage Convention has stood the test of time and its relevance is beyond question, declaring: ‘I am sure that we can confidently look forward to the next 40 years!’

However, it is clear that its implementation procedures will have to keep pace with and adapt to the changing times and context. As custodians of this Convention, Mr Rao said, we must act in the interest of the larger common good, rather than in the pursuit of our own narrow interests.

The reflections on Sustainable Development and the Role of Local Communities throughout the 40th anniversary year will surely help these convictions become a reality.

This brochure provides a record of the various initiatives that the World Heritage community undertook to mark this important milestone in the history of the Convention.

UNESCO Director-General Irina Bokova called for ‘a year of renewal for World Heritage’ as she launched the 40th anniversary of the adoption of the World Heritage Convention on 7 November 2011 at the General Assembly of States Parties to the Convention. The year’s exciting events throughout the world focused on the theme of Sustainable Development and the Role of Local Communities – to illustrate how the participation of local communities can – and should – be a win-win scenario for everyone committed to protecting World Heritage.

Throughout 2012, more than 120 events were held in 48 countries. The ICOMOS Monuments and Sites Day (18 April 2012) was dedicated to World Heritage and the IUCN World Conservation Congress (6-15 September 2012) held an anniversary celebration on Jeju Island, Republic of Korea, adopting resolutions specifically related to the Convention.

A variety of activities – including conferences, thematic and capacity-building workshops and training programmes – as well as events open to the general public – such as guided visits at World Heritage sites, photographic exhibitions and video contests – took place throughout the world from November 2011 to December 2012. To mark the close of the anniversary year, an event hosted by the Government of Japan in Kyoto from 6 to 8 November 2012 brought together more than 600 people from 61 countries.

It was preceded by a three-day youth programme on ‘World Heritage: the role of local communities and youth for the next decade’.

A special logo was created for the anniversary year. It was used – on videos, publications, brochures, gadgets, posters, exhibitions, working documents, websites, proceedings, banners, invitation letters, postcards, envelopes, newspapers, maps, CDs, folders, badges, flyers and conference bags – by States Parties around the world.

The 40th anniversary of the Convention and related events were mentioned in many major print and online publications.

States Parties chose innovative and diverse ways to celebrate. A video and press statement by United States Secretary of State Hillary Clinton was released on 16 March 2012. A 110-minute episode of the French television documentary series ‘Des racines et des ailes’ was dedicated entirely to ‘Forty years of World Heritage’; it aired on the France 3 television network, drawing an audience of 3.2 million viewers. The Group of 77 developing countries (G-77) and China organized a photo exhibition at UNESCO Headquarters from 7 to 10 November 2011.

Among the World Heritage Centre partners who actively collaborated in the activities celebrating the 40th anniversary:

- Panasonic, Jaeger-LeCoultre and Citibank sponsored the ceremony for the anniversary year launch at UNESCO Headquarters on 30 January 2012.
- Panasonic promoted World Heritage through financial contributions for communication and educational activities, such as ‘The World Heritage Special’, aired on the National Geographic Channel in 183 countries.
- The Smithsonian Institution (United States) created a web portal and a virtual exhibition entitled ‘Protection, Preservation and Prosperity: Celebrating 40 Years of the World Heritage Convention’.
- NHK (Japan Broadcasting Corporation) provided moving images on World Heritage for use on the UNESCO website.
- HISTORY provided the World Heritage Centre with Public Service Announcements on World Heritage issues.
- TBS (Tokyo Broadcasting System, a Japanese television network) produced films on World Heritage sites to use online and at live events.
A Grand Launch
The 40th anniversary celebrations kicked off with a performance by legendary jazz musician and UNESCO Goodwill Ambassador Herbie Hancock on 30 January 2012. Permanent Delegations to UNESCO, high profile personalities, UNESCO’s institutional and private sector partners and the media, as well as members of the public who are passionate about World Heritage and its preservation, attended this special event held at UNESCO Headquarters in Paris. Throughout the evening, original video clips retraced the history of the Convention from its creation in 1972, highlighting the diversity of the sites inscribed on the World Heritage List as well as bringing attention to threats to World Heritage sites and highlighting its successes.

Sensitizing local communities
In keeping with the theme of the anniversary year – Sustainable Development and the Role of Local Communities – a number of countries put together national activities to sensitize local audiences to the challenges of the Convention. The diverse range of activities included heritage days (Chile, Germany), World Heritage-related topics on school examinations (Canada), public events and visits at World Heritage sites (France, Germany, Netherlands, Spain), workshops aimed at local communities (Serbia), art contests (France, Japan), teaching materials (France, Spain), open days at World Heritage sites (Netherlands, Spain), and many others.

Gatherings of local experts and site managers
The 40th anniversary also provided a unique occasion for national, regional and/or local experts and stakeholders to engage in lively discussions on sustainable development and local communities, as well as to assess 40 years of the Convention.

Events promoting dialogue and debate took place around the world, including national meetings of site managers exploring challenges in the daily management of sites (Bulgaria, China, Cyprus), expert symposiums about specific restoration techniques (Spain), round tables on World Heritage status and the needs of the local inhabitants (Estonia), public/private meetings with local foundations and local authorities (Spain), training programmes for tour guides (Spain), as well as workshops, conferences and debates in Argentina, Barbados, Belgium (Flanders), Chile, China, Colombia, Cuba, Czech Republic, Ecuador, Finland, France, Greece, Hungary, Jamaica, Japan, Mexico, Morocco, Netherlands, Portugal, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, United Kingdom and others.

International meetings
The international community of experts and stakeholders in the field of heritage – from countries as diverse as Algeria, Belarus, China, Greece, Italy, Japan, Mexico, Montenegro, Norway, Peru, Republic of Korea, South Africa,
Turkey, the United States and Viet Nam – took advantage of the 40th anniversary to discuss the theme of Sustainable Development and the Role of Communities in World Heritage preservation and more generally, the role of the Convention in today’s world and in the coming years. These discussions often led to recommendations, declarations or proposals from States Parties and organizations for new policies to support World Heritage.

Exhibitions

To celebrate the anniversary year, several countries, including Bulgaria, Ecuador, Estonia, France, Hungary, Lithuania and the Solomon Islands organized public photographic exhibitions on World Heritage sites and showcasing the diversity of sites inscribed on the World Heritage List.

Raising awareness

States Parties expressed their creativity by designing activities to boost the visibility of the anniversary, resulting in an impressive range of initiatives, including gala events (Russian Federation during the 36th World Heritage Committee, and Cuba); special postage stamps (San Marino); video projections and radio programmes (Spain); postcards (Sweden); an anniversary ceremony that brought together more than 150 people and launched a richly illustrated book on all the Swiss World Heritage sites (Switzerland); and, in the United States, a national video competition using YouTube (‘Why do you think U.S. World Heritage sites are important to the world?’), a ‘passport’ booklet highlighting World Heritage sites, and a dedicated website.
A look at a selection of
THE YEAR’S MAIN EVENTS

International Expert Meeting on 'World Heritage and Sustainable Development'
Ouro Preto, Brazil, 6-8 February 2012
Participants at this consultative expert meeting discussed policies and procedures to mainstream sustainable development into the processes of the World Heritage Convention. The meeting, hosted by the Brazilian Institute for National Historic and Artistic Heritage, brought together about 50 participants, including experts from all regions of the world, Advisory Bodies, UNESCO Category 2 Centres and representatives of Multilateral Environmental Agreements. Recommendations included setting up an expert working group to develop a policy on integrating sustainable development into the Convention; and developing a set of indicators to assess the contribution of heritage conservation and management to sustainable development. In view of the close relation and interdependence between biological and cultural diversity, participants also recommended that a UNESCO declaration on sustainable development and biocultural diversity be developed.

Interregional Conference on 'Living with World Heritage'
Røros, Norway, 14-16 May 2012
Almost 140 participants from 28 countries, mainly from Europe and Africa, attended this conference, organized by the Norwegian Ministry of Environment in cooperation with other Norwegian authorities and the Norwegian National Commission for UNESCO. The Conference’s objectives were to give World Heritage local communities from vastly different parts of the world – Africa and Norway – an opportunity to identify common concerns and needs and to provide a forum for local communities, government authorities and international representatives to directly discuss the concerns they had identified. Visits by representatives of local communities living at two South African and three Norwegian World Heritage properties gave them a chance to start exchanging experiences and sharing information even before the Conference. Young people were encouraged to take an active role from the planning stages, including by using new social media – Conference website, Facebook, Twitter. In the end, the Conference participants agreed upon principles and recommendations, mainly noting the inherent relation between heritage and local communities and their well-being, emphasizing the relevance of heritage to the goals of sustainable development.

20th session of the Congress on Archaeology and Cultural Heritage of the Arab World
Algiers, Algeria, 13-15 March 2012
Co-organized by the Algerian Ministry of Culture, this statutory meeting of the Arab League Educational, Cultural and Scientific Organization (ALECSO) brought more than 80 experts and representatives of international and regional organizations from 16 countries together to advance the debate on sustainable development in Arab countries. Recommendations focused on, among other issues, sustainable harmonization between tourism development and cultural heritage protection, and enhancing the role of local communities in the development of cultural tourism and their integration into the sustainable development process.
International Conference on ‘Involving Communities in World Heritage Conservation: Concepts and Actions’
Buyeo, Republic of Korea, 10–12 September 2012

About 500 participants – local inhabitants, researchers and public officers from World Heritage sites – agreed on a shared vision for recognizing sustainable development of and for the community as the ultimate goal of heritage conservation at this international conference organized by the Cultural Heritage Administration of Republic of Korea and ICOMOS-Korea. The Conference sought to clarify the role of local communities in development and to fill some of the gaps between international principles and local practices. Seven cases of representative World Heritage sites in Asian countries, along with six thematic presentations, were discussed and analysed, so that practical guidelines for community involvement in World Heritage conservation could be drawn. Participants proposed recommendations and checklists for local community involvement which respond to the procedural steps of World Heritage nomination, inscription and monitoring.

International Conference on ‘Living with World Heritage in Africa’
Johannesburg, South Africa, 26–29 September 2012

Organized by the Government of the Republic of South Africa, in collaboration with the World Heritage Centre and the African World Heritage Fund, the conference brought together about 300 high-level decision-makers from African governments, heritage institutions, the extractive industry, local communities and the development sector from 16 African countries. Sub-themes identifying means and strategies to ensure protection of World Heritage properties while contributing to the social and economic development and the quality of life of local communities were also explored. In the African Ministers Declaration in support of Mali, participants called for an end to the destruction of heritage. The Conference also produced an Africa Position Paper and Recommendations addressed to extractive industries, one of the main stakeholders impacting on heritage sites, sustainable development, local communities and sustainable tourism.

International Expert Workshop on the World Heritage Convention and Indigenous Peoples
Copenhagen, Denmark, 20–21 September 2012

Indigenous representatives and human rights experts from all continents, as well as representatives from UNESCO, ICOMOS and IUCN, exchanged views on World Heritage procedures and matters which can concern indigenous peoples. The workshop was organized by the Danish Agency for Culture and co-hosted by the Government of Greenland and the International Work Group for Indigenous Affairs. Recommendations focused on five main areas: a process for revising the Operational Guidelines to ensure that the implementation of the World Heritage Convention is consistent with the UN Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples and a more general human rights-based approach; a mechanism enabling indigenous peoples to fully and effectively participate in the processes of the Convention; procedures to ensure indigenous peoples’ free, prior and informed consent; improving access to information; and redress for past injustices and violations of indigenous peoples’ rights in World Heritage areas.
The future of World Heritage: YOUTH IN ACTION

Many events organized during the 40th anniversary year were particularly targeted at young people to raise their awareness of World Heritage conservation and encourage their active involvement.

Argentina: Youth training program on sustainable development – Tourism, Heritage and School, Ministry of Tourism and National Commission (El Calafate, Santa Cruz, 22-23 March 2012)

Canada: World Heritage-related topic for final school examinations and awareness campaign using the 40th anniversary logo

Chile: School photo and story contest: Recognizing Our Monuments (nationwide, September 2012)

Denmark: School class competition on board and digital games on Danish World Heritage sites, Ministry for Children and Education and Ministry of Culture (Kronborg Castle, 12 November 2012)

India: International Youth Forum Go4BioDiv – Marine and Coastal Diversity in parallel to the 11th Meeting of the Conference of the Parties to the Convention on Biological Diversity (Hyderabad, 8-19 October 2012)

Japan: Portraying Kyoto’s Cultural Heritage Contest, Kyoto Committee (Kyoto, 20 July-18 September 2012);

Republic of Korea: 1st Asia-Pacific World Heritage Regional Forum of Site Managers and Youth NGOs Linking Networks (Seoul, 26-31 August 2012)

Russia: International Youth Forum Water and World Heritage (Orlyonok, Krasnodar, 30 May-20 June 2012), International Youth Model of the World Heritage Committee (Kazan, Republic of Tatarstan, 1-9 July 2012)

Serbia: Celebratory event Living together for youth and local communities, (Gomizgrad-Romuliana, 9 June 2012)

Spain: 4th Ibero-American Youth Forum: Future of the Convention and the SCs (Alcala de Henares and Molina, 10-20 June 2012)

United Kingdom: UNESCO World Heritage Youth Summit, alongside London Olympic Games equestrian event (London, 27-29 June 2012)

World Heritage Volunteers 2012

Throughout the 40th anniversary year, more than 800 young World Heritage Volunteers (WHV) crossed borders, shared their cultures, and worked together to preserve natural and cultural sites, and raise awareness amongst local communities about their heritage. WHV 2012: Beyond Territories and Boundaries consisted of 50 work camps at 40 World Heritage sites in 25 countries from all continents and involved 35 youth organizations. To name just a few of the activities, France hosted the WHV Evaluation and Strategic Planning Meeting, while the meetings Leaders and Media Training, and Media Training were held in Viet Nam and Mexico.

The year concluded with the World Heritage Volunteers Conference, held in December at San Cristobal de las Casas, Chiapas, Mexico. The World Heritage Volunteers project is jointly organized by UNESCO World Heritage Centre and the Coordinating Committee for International Voluntary Service (CCIVS).

Patrimonito addresses sustainable development

Two new episodes of the Patrimonito cartoon series were produced on the theme of the 40th anniversary year of the World Heritage Convention – Sustainable Development and the Role of Local Communities. Patrimonito in Peru: The Community of the City of Cuzco (Episode 9) highlights the role of community and Patrimonito in Lebanon: Sustainable Development for the Site of Quadi Qadisha and the Forest of the Cedars of God (Episode 10) encourages young people to protect World Heritage with a focus on the importance of sustainable development. All episodes of the cartoon series are available online at the UNESCO World Heritage Centre website.
A landmark event: THE CLOSING CELEBRATION of the 40th anniversary

This three-day Closing Event held in Kyoto (Japan), 6-8 November 2012, to mark the end of the year-long worldwide celebration of the 40th anniversary of the World Heritage Convention was, in the words of Kishore Rao, Director of the World Heritage Centre, ‘truly a landmark event’. The Closing Event, jointly organized by the World Heritage Centre and the Government of Japan, which also financed it, brought together more than 600 participants, from international heritage experts to members of the general public, from 61 countries. It was an occasion to explore in detail all issues related to the theme of the anniversary year – World Heritage and Sustainable Development: the Role of Local Communities.

Opening Ceremony and Commemorative Speeches

The Chairperson of the event, Ambassador Masuo Nishibayashi, and UNESCO Director-General Irina Bokova opened the celebration, along with Kazuyuki Hamada, Parliamentary Vice Minister for Foreign Affairs; Daisuke Matsumoto, Senior Vice Minister of Education, Culture, Sports, Science and Technology; Yasuhiro Kajiwara, Parliamentary Secretary for Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries; and Kazuaki Hoshino, Deputy Director General, Nature Conservation Bureau, Ministry of the Environment.

In her address, the Director-General called the World Heritage Convention a ‘model of international cooperation’ and pointed out three priorities for its future development: reinforcing the capacity of States Parties in site preservation; involving local authorities, indigenous communities and youth in site management; and, as an overall goal, reinforcing the credibility of the World Heritage Convention.

Keynote speaker Christina Cameron, Canada Research Chair at the University of Montreal, and twice Chair of the World Heritage Committee, called for a ‘rejuvenation’ of the Convention, noting its many successes while pointing out recent trends that threaten its credibility.

Growing popularity and today’s challenges

A series of panel discussions reflected on different aspects of sustainable development and the role of local communities.

Major challenges in heritage site protection over the past 40 years, a historical perspective on the evolution of the Convention, a legal viewpoint on the concept of responsible sovereignty as well as balancing preservation and development in African countries were among the topics of the first panel discussion, Dealing with Challenges, moderated by former UNESCO Director-General Koichiro Matsuura.

In a session dedicated to the World Heritage Convention today, the panel discussion on Our Life and Heritage: Sustainable Development of World Heritage and World Heritage for Sustainable Development touched on topics including participatory tourism management at World Heritage sites such as at Shiretoko, Japan; the role of World Heritage as a model for sustainability; sustainable development examples at African World Heritage sites; and the role of cultural heritage conservation from the World Bank’s perspective.

Disaster Prevention, Recovery from Disaster with Communities touched on 20 years of implementing the World Heritage Convention at Angkor, Cambodia; the challenges of preserving the cultural heritage landscape of Bamiyan, Afghanistan; and damage reduction and recovery from damage through conserving natural ecosystems.

Community involvement and raising awareness of the principles of the Convention were the topics explored in the panel discussion Capacity Building for an Enhanced Implementation of the Convention, Communication Activities for Better Awareness of the Convention and Sustainable Development Connecting Conservation and Communities.

In his commemorative address, Francesco Bandarin, UNESCO’s Assistant Director-General for Culture, focused on the umbrella programme of culture and development, which is key to the post-2015 international development agenda.

The first official recognition of best practice in World Heritage site management was given to the Historic Town of Vigan (Philippines) and a certificate was presented to the Mayor of Vigan, Eva Marie S. Medina.

World Heritage: Benefits Beyond Borders, a thematic publication of case studies illustrating benefits of World Heritage listing to local communities, was also launched on this occasion.

The role of local community and youth
A three-day youth programme organized by the Japanese Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Ritsumeikan University in collaboration with the World Heritage Centre, brought together 11 international and 18 Japanese young people under the banner ‘World Heritage: the Role of Local Communities and Youth for the Next Decade’. During the main session, the statement of the participants in the Youth Programme expressing their heartfelt desire to become more actively involved in all aspects of the implementation of the Convention met with resounding applause.
The Kyoto Vision: A Call for Action

The Kyoto Vision, produced at the Closing Event, briefly outlines the achievements of the past 40 years of the World Heritage Convention and the importance of people-centred conservation of World Heritage. It concludes with a Call for Action, appealing to the international community to, among other points, ensure effective involvement of local communities, indigenous peoples, experts and youth in all facets of World Heritage conservation.

We, the participants gathered at Kyoto, on the occasion of the Closing Event of the Celebrations of the 40th Anniversary of the World Heritage Convention, wish to acknowledge the generous hospitality and intellectual leadership of the Japanese authorities in providing a forum to reflect on the achievements, present issues and future evolution of this unique international conservation treaty.

We reaffirm the centrality of the theme adopted by the General Assembly of the States Parties to the Convention and by the World Heritage Committee for this Fortieth anniversary, namely ‘World Heritage and Sustainable Development: The Role of Communities’. The relationship between World Heritage and local communities is indeed at the heart of the Convention and is fundamental to address the challenges confronting World Heritage properties, through increasing demographic and development pressures, global financial crises and climate change.

We recall, in this context, the outcome document of the International Conference on Sustainable Development ‘The Future We Want’ (Rio de Janeiro, June 2012) and the ‘Vision and Strategic Action Plan for the Implementation of the World Heritage Convention 2012-2022’ adopted by the 18th General Assembly of States Parties (UNESCO, 2011), as well as the in-depth reflections and results from several expert and consultative meetings organized in all regions of the world under the framework of the 40th anniversary of the Convention.

Achievements of 40 years of the World Heritage Convention

We recognize that the World Heritage Convention, with its 190 States Parties, is one of the most powerful tools for heritage conservation, with a shared vision combining the protection of cultural and natural heritage and the value of Outstanding Universal Value in one single instrument. We acknowledge the significant contribution of the Convention to social cohesion, dialogue, tolerance, cultural diversity and peace, through its emphasis on the shared importance of World Heritage for all of humankind and the promotion of international cooperation for its safeguarding.

We are also aware of some contributions made over time in strengthening the policies and practices of the Convention as a standard-setter in heritage preservation globally; the importance of youth and full participation of experts in the implementation of the Convention; the role intergenerational equity and all partners and stakeholders in heritage conservation at local, national and regional levels, including local communities and indigenous peoples, whom we acknowledge with respect and pay tribute to on this occasion.

We are concerned, however, about the serious challenges to the World Heritage Convention, associated with development pressures, conflicts, man-made and natural disasters, as well as the gap in the representativeness of the World Heritage List. We also note with concern the crucial lack of technical capacity and financial resources to implement the Convention, particularly in the least developed and developing countries.

A Sustainable Earth and the Role of World Heritage

We are conscious of the enormous challenges our planet faces in order to ensure its sustainability and of the need for a transformative change to be reflected in the post-2015 development agenda, which would take into consideration the broader picture of human progress beyond GDP.

We are convinced that a people-centred conservation of the world’s cultural and natural heritage is an opportunity to provide critical learning models for the pursuit of sustainable development and for ensuring the harmonious relationship between local communities and their environment. The concept of heritage is fundamental to the logic of sustainable development as heritage results from the dynamic and continuous interaction between relevant communities and their environment. Heritage sustains and improves the quality of life of people, as reinforced in the relevant internationally recognized policies such as the Strategic Plan for Biodiversity 2011-2020 and the Aichi Biodiversity Targets, the achievement of which is beneficial to both cultural and natural heritage.

The acknowledgment and conservation of the diversity of the world’s cultural and natural heritage, and the equitable sharing of the benefits deriving from it, enhance a feeling of place and belonging, mutual respect for others and a sense of collective purpose, which contribute to the social cohesion of a community.

The Importance of the Role of Community

We reiterate the important role of communities, including local communities and indigenous peoples, in the implementation of the World Heritage Convention, in accordance with one of its five strategic objectives, the fifth ‘C’, adopted in 2007, and the Strategic Action Plan 2012-2022. The Convention’s role in intergenerational equity; and all stakeholders and ensuring effective involvement of local communities, indigenous peoples, experts and youth in conservation from the preparatory phase of the World Heritage nomination process, to the implementation of the Convention and by the World Heritage Committee.

To realize this Vision, the participants wish to launch an appeal to the international community with a view to:

> mobilizing substantial financial resources for heritage conservation globally in the spirit of solidarity and cooperation;
> developing innovative responses to share experiences, good practice and knowledge related to conservation and management strategies and a development model based on the network of communities, in particular, should be empowered to harness the benefits of heritage to society through specific awareness-raising initiatives, skills development programmes and the establishment of economic benefits and empowerment for local communities, and the appreciation of cultural diversities by visitors.

A Call for Action

For 40 years, the World Heritage Convention has embodied the global ideals and ethics of conservation. While continuing to emphasize the importance of protecting a selection of outstanding sites important for all of humankind, a holistic approach is necessary to include wider dimensions arising from new emerging challenges that threaten the foundation of our societies. The question is not only to save exceptional heritage and cultural and natural heritage properties, but to demonstrate, in support of World Heritage and sustainable development, including capacity building at all levels; > sharing responsibility for effectively addressing these challenges and to embed the Convention’s role in heritage preservation and management efforts.

> enhancing cooperation and coordination among all stakeholders and ensuring effective involvement of local communities, indigenous peoples, experts and youth in conservation from the preparatory phase of the World Heritage nomination process, so that heritage conservation contributes to the sustainable development of the whole society;
> ensuring the sustainability of local communities through other domains such as intangible cultural heritage and cultural and creative industries, which play a crucial role; and > implementing, as a priority, the Strategic Action Plan 2012-2022 adopted by the General Assembly of States Parties to the Convention.

Kyoto, 8 November 2012
Recognizing ‘best practices’ in World Heritage management

A One-Off Initiative to recognize and reward best practices in World Heritage conservation was organized on the occasion of the 40th anniversary, following the decision of the World Heritage Committee in 2011. In December 2011, the World Heritage Centre called on States Parties to propose properties in their countries that they regard as a ‘best practice’ in successful and sustainable management.

Best practices were defined as those that are tried, tested and applied in different situations and in a wider context. Out of the 28 entries, a 10-member selection committee recognized the Historic Town of Vigan (Philippines) for its successful and sustainable management, achieved with relatively limited resources; involvement of the local community in many aspects of sustainable conservation and management of the property; and a multi-faceted approach to the protection of the site.

World Heritage: Benefits Beyond Borders

This seminal book presents a powerful case for the essential contribution of World Heritage to sustainable development through 26 case studies from around the world. These thematically, typologically and regionally diverse studies illustrate the benefits to local communities and ecosystems of World Heritage inscription and share lessons learnt involving various stakeholders. Cross-disciplinary in its scope, this book provides a meeting point for researchers, practitioners, community representatives and the wider public and promotes cultural and natural heritage conservation as a key vector of sustainable development and social cohesion. The publication of the book was financed by UNESCO Japan Funds-in-Trust for the preservation of the world’s culture heritage. The English version is a co-publication of UNESCO and Cambridge University Press. A French version is in preparation.
The inspiration for so many people to gather and discuss was the theme chosen for the anniversary: World Heritage and Sustainable Development: the Role of Local Communities, which proved to be especially relevant and timely. What did all these people have to say on this topic? Is there a common message that has emerged from this global reflection? And what are the key lessons learnt from the whole exercise?

The numerous reports produced throughout the year indicate, first of all, that the 40th anniversary provided the platform for a broad debate on the role of heritage in society – including its intangible aspects, well beyond the boundaries of the 1972 Convention and its notion of Outstanding Universal Value. As has often been the case over the past 40 years, World Heritage was looked at as a reference for heritage in general, a standard to be followed, rather than an elite club.

If a single message had to be selected from the hundreds of principles and recommendations adopted, this would be the realization that, in the face of global challenges such as demographic growth, climate change, disasters, increasing inequalities and persisting poverty, heritage conservation and management should no longer be considered as objectives in themselves, in isolation from the socio-economic context. They are redefined as integral parts of, and essential tools for concretely achieving the sustainable development of the society at the environmental, social and economic level. This presupposes that communities, especially local interest groups, are closely associated through an inclusive participatory process to the governance of heritage, starting from the definition of its values.

Case studies presented at the numerous conferences and meetings held over the year throughout the world demonstrated how a people-centred conservation of the world’s cultural and natural heritage is an opportunity to provide critical learning models for the pursuit of sustainable development and for ensuring a harmonious relationship between communities and their environment.

The implications of this new approach should now be drawn within the World Heritage Convention and reflected in its operational procedures. This will be done in particular through the development of a policy for the integration of a sustainable development perspective within the processes of the Convention, as requested by the World Heritage Committee at its 36th session (Saint Petersburg, 2012). A draft of the policy will be presented to the Committee for its consideration in 2014.

International Union for Conservation of Nature (IUCN) World Conservation Congress (Jeju Island, Republic of Korea, 6-15 September 2012)

The Congress, a major assembly of natural heritage conservation stakeholders, is held every four years. A Conservation Forum, which took place during the first five days of the Congress, included 18 different events on the World Heritage Convention discussing the achievements and challenges of the Convention. IUCN Members and partners discussed cutting-edge ideas, thinking and practice in conservation. One event was dedicated to The World Heritage Convention at 40: Engaging the IUCN constituency for conservation and communities. That workshop reflected on the need for stakeholder participation, in particular of local and indigenous communities, and advocated for a stronger involvement of the civil society in the Convention.

The Assembly adopted a specific Resolution entitled ‘Strengthening of the World Heritage Convention’ which advocates for upholding the highest standards for the Convention.
