7.2 Introduction to St Petersburg

St Petersburg, one of the most beautiful cities in Russia, was founded by the Tzar Peter the Great in May 1703, as the capital of the Russian Empire. Currently, it is the biggest metropolis (nearly 5 million population) in the North. The city is situated in the Neva Delta surrounded by numerous islands, covering a total area of more than 600 m2.

The most illustrious architects, such as Trezzini, Rossi, Benois, Rastrelli and many others, were involved in its development. St Petersburg has a multitude of squares, palaces, mansions and royal residences, making it a unique ensemble of complementary elements. At the outset of the construction of St Petersburg, Peter the Great wished to build a “regular city” with strict development criteria, along the lines of project types, inspired by replicas of Amsterdam or Venice. Everywhere in St Petersburg an orientation towards Europe is evident and appears to have been built in its image, by the same architects and builders. Nevertheless, there is a sense of something unusual and original in the Petersburg atmosphere. The city adopted the creative works of foreign architects, and this despite their extraordinary work. But the spirit of the “Queen of the Adriatic”, Venice, left its imprint on St Petersburg, Venetian gondolas making their way along the rivers and canals of the city. Whilst combating its major enemies, two opposing elements – fire and water - the city expanded. The magnificence of the palaces and garden ensembles, the vast areas of squares, clearly linked to the city, the mystery of its granite quays, have inspired many generations of artists in the creation of their unique works, recognized worldwide, among whom Pouchkin, Tchaikovsky, Dostoyevsky, Shostakovitch, Nabokov, Gergiev.

The historical centre of St Petersburg, constructed following a unique plan, has safeguarded its architecture and traditions to this day. Some of the most prestigious national and worldwide collections of paintings, sculpture and architecture can be found here. The city owes its fame to the Hermitage, the Marinsky Theatre, Russia’s National Library, the Russian Museum, the Peter and Paul Fortress, The Maly Theatre of Dramatic Art, and the St Isaac Cathedral. The suburbs of St Petersburg are also remarkable for their unique beauty and originality: Pouchkin, with its Catherine II Park of a classic style and its “Amber Room” today restored, as are many other palace interiors; Peterhof, the fountain capital, architectural monument and garden art; Pavlovsk, with one of the largest parks in Europe.
Today, St Petersburg is the nerve centre of a country disposing of vast capacities as concerns attracting investments, and the development of tourism and international relations.

The historical centre of St Petersburg is inscribed on the World Heritage List.

For additional information on St Petersburg, please visit the following Internet site: http://www.saint-petersburg.com/.

The exchange rate in relation to the euro and dollar vary frequently, but are roughly 1/40 and 1/30 respectively or 1 EUR = 40 RUB and 1 USD = 30 RUB. It is important to consult the official daily exchange. Money may be exchanged in all exchange bureaux or banks, which are numerous in the city centre. Most ATMs are available 24h/24 and 7j/7. Credit cards are widely accepted for purchases and services. Exchange bureaux are often located in hotels.
