Saint Petersburg was the vision of Russian Tsar Peter the Great, who began building his new capital along the Neva River in 1703. Recruiting Europe's greatest architects and an army of forced labor. Peter erected a carefully planned city of ornate palaces, parks, and monumental squares in just two decades. Today some 400 bridges cross its network of shimmering canals. The World Heritage emblem symbolizes the interdependence of the world's natural and cultural diversity. The central square represents the achievements of human skill and inspiration, and the circle celebrates the gifts of nature. The emblem is round, like the world, a symbol of global protec-tion for the heritage of all humankind.

> The Earthen Architecture Conservation Programme works toward conserving and revitalizing earthen architecture, which is threatened by natural disasters and industrialization. Currently, some one hundred properties on the World Heritage List are partially or totally built with earth.

World Heritage sites are inscribed on the List on the basis of their merits as forming a significant contribution to the cultural and natural heritage of the world. Their outstanding universal value is considered to go beyond national boundaries and to be of importance for future generations.

Conserving the diversity of life on Earth is critical to global human welfare. With the support of the World Heritage Convention, the most important biodiversity sites receive international recognition as well as technical and financial assistance to deal with threats such as agricultural encroachment, alien species and poaching.

Ecuador's Sangay National Park, mainly uninhabited, encompasses glacial mountain peaks, low-lying rainforests, and more than 300 lakes. The park's rugged terrain, located near the meeting point of two tectonic plates, includes two 5,000-meter active volcanoes.

The fortress town of Cartagena was founded in 1533 on the coast of Colombia. Magnificent colonial stone churches, palaces and gardens still testify to the wealth that flowed through the port in the form of ilver, gold and slaves Powerful tides in Canada's Bay of Fundy wash away layers of rock at Joggins Fossil Cliffs to reveal a geological record more than 300 mil-lion years old. The Coal Age rainforest supported some 200 species here, including the world's first reptiles.

rom the vast plains of the Serengeti to historic cities such as Vienna, Lima and Kyoto; from the prehistoric rock art on the Iberian Peninsula to the Statue of Liberty; from the Kasbah of Algiers to the Imperial Palace in Beijing — all of these places, as varied as they are, have one thing in common. All are World Heritage sites of outstanding cultural or natural value to humanity and are worthy of protection for future generations to know and enjoy.

he United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) works with countries around the world to identify and protect cultural and natural places that merit recognition as part of the common heritage of humankind. UNESCO adopted the Convention concerning the Protection of the World Cultural and Natural Heritage in 1972. Since then, 187 countries have ratified the treaty, and at present 936 properties are inscribed on the List - 725 of which are cultural, 183 natural and 28 mixed (a combination of the two). They are noted here in alphabetical order by country and in the order they were listed
