Verbal Description: The boundary of the acreage of Taos Pueblo proposed for World Heritage nomination encloses an irregular tear-drop shaped area which is approximately 2900 feet (883.9m) long, southwest to northeast, and approximately 1200 feet (365.75m) wide, southeast to northwest, at its widest point.

The boundary may be defined by six corner points. Point A is located just east of the fork in the road which follows the Rio Pueblo east of the village. Point B is located immediately southeast of the intersection of the road leading to the Pueblo School and the road which encircles the village, in the center of the former road. It is approximately 2240 feet (682.75m), S49.5 degrees W, of Point B and is approximately 500 feet (152.4m), S29 degrees E, of the Taos Pueblo Visitor Center. Point D is located immediately south of the intersection of the modern road to Taos and the road which encircles the village. It is approximately 400 feet (121.9m), N 29 degrees W, of Point C and 100 feet (30.5m), S29 degrees E, of the Visitor Center. Point E is located immediately west of the ruin of the mission of San Geronimo de Taos between the road which encircles the village and an adjacent corral. It is approximately 450 feet (137.1m), N 2 degrees E, of Point D. Point F is located immediately north of the western-most of the two trash middens on the north side of the village. It is approximately 660 feet (201.1m), N 42 degrees E, of Point E and approximately 2240 feet (682.75m), S 81.5 degrees W, of Point A.

The village began to be established in the 1500s and was home to several Puebloan peoples. It is situated in a geologically fertile area, and its location on a river has made it a strategic point in the region. The village has a rich history, and its architecture reflects the influence of Spanish and Native American cultures. The Taos Pueblo is a living community, and it is home to the Taos Pueblo people, who continue to practice their traditional way of life.

The Taos Pueblo is a significant example of Pueblo architecture, and it is a great example of the resilience of the Taos people in the face of changing circumstances. The Taos Pueblo is a UNESCO World Heritage Site and is a testament to the rich cultural history of the United States.
