2  Members and role of the World Heritage Committee

The 21 States Parties of the current World Heritage Committee are the following:

Australia, Bahrain, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Brazil, China, Egypt, Ethiopia, Guatemala, Hungary, Kyrgyzstan, Mali, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Russian Federation, Saint Kitts and Nevis, Saudi Arabia, South Africa, Spain, Thailand, Uganda

According to the World Heritage Convention, a Committee member’s term of office is for six years, but most States Parties choose to be Members of the Committee for only four years, to give other States Parties an opportunity to be on the Committee.

The World Heritage Committee meets once a year. It is responsible for the implementation of the World Heritage Convention, defines the use of the World Heritage Fund and allocates financial assistance upon requests from States Parties. It has the final say on whether a property is inscribed on the World Heritage List. It examines reports on the state of conservation of inscribed properties and asks States Parties to take action when properties are not being properly managed. It also decides on the inscription or deletion of properties on the List of World Heritage in Danger.

The state of conservation reports for 258 sites will be examined during this session.

3  Members and role of the Bureau of the World Heritage Committee

The Bureau consists of one Chairperson, one Rapporteur (who are both appointed in their personal capacity), and five Vice-Chairs (which are States Parties) elected annually by the Committee. The Bureau of the Committee coordinates the work of the Committee and fixes the dates, hours and order of business of meetings. The election of the new Bureau will take place at the end of the session of the World Heritage Committee.
4 Sites nominated for inscription to the World Heritage List

World Heritage Basic Facts

1 What is World Heritage?

World Heritage is the designation for places on Earth that are of outstanding universal value to humanity and as such, have been inscribed on the World Heritage List to be protected for future generations to appreciate and enjoy. Places as diverse and unique as the Pyramids of Egypt, the Great Barrier Reef in Australia, Galápagos Islands in Ecuador, the Taj Mahal in India, the Grand Canyon in the USA, or the Acropolis in Greece are examples of the 1092 natural and cultural places inscribed on the World Heritage List to date.

2 What does it mean for a site to be inscribed on the List?

Once a country signs the Convention, and has sites inscribed on the World Heritage List, the resulting prestige often helps raise awareness among citizens and governments for heritage preservation. Greater awareness leads to a general rise in the level of the protection and conservation given to heritage properties. A country may also receive financial assistance and expert advice from the World Heritage Committee to support activities for the preservation of its sites.

3 What is the World Heritage Convention?

The Convention Concerning the Protection of the World Cultural and Natural Heritage is an international treaty that was adopted by the General Conference of UNESCO in 1972. It is based on the premise that certain places on Earth are of outstanding universal value and should therefore form part of the common heritage of humankind. The countries that ratify the Convention (States Parties) have become part of an international community, united in a common mission to identify and safeguard our world's most outstanding natural and cultural heritage. While fully respecting the national sovereignty, and without prejudice to property rights provided by national legislation, the States Parties recognize that the protection of the World Heritage is the duty of the international community as a whole.

4 What are the legal implications of the Convention?

The UNESCO World Heritage Convention is a treaty that has become, over the past 45 years, the foremost international legal tool in support of the conservation of the world's cultural and natural heritage. Today, 193 countries (called States Parties) have ratified the Convention, making it an almost universally accepted set of principles and framework of action.

5 How is a site inscribed on the List?
A site goes through a nomination process before being considered for inscription by the World Heritage Committee. A site can be proposed for inscription only by the country in which the property is located.

For more information about the nomination process please visit http://whc.unesco.org/en/nominations

6  Who nominates sites?

Countries (or States Parties) submit nomination proposals to the World Heritage Committee. If the Committee determines, based on the recommendations of its Advisory Bodies (International Centre for the Study of the Preservation and Restoration of Cultural Property (ICCROM), International Council on Museums and Sites (ICOMOS) and the International Union for Conservation of Nature (IUCN)), that the nomination meets at least one of the necessary criteria, then the property is inscribed on the World Heritage List. In general, the Committee adds about 25-30 sites per year to the list. Today there are 1092 sites on the List, located in 167 countries around the world.

For more information please refer to the Operational Guidelines http://whc.unesco.org/en/guidelines/

7  What are the criteria for nominating a site?

To be included on the World Heritage List, sites must be of outstanding universal value and meet at least one out of the following ten selection criteria.

Selection criteria

1. to represent a masterpiece of human creative genius;
2. to exhibit an important interchange of human values, over a span of time or within a cultural area of the world, on developments in architecture or technology, monumental arts, town-planning or landscape design;
3. to bear a unique or at least exceptional testimony to a cultural tradition or to a civilization which is living or which has disappeared;
4. to be an outstanding example of a type of building, architectural or technological ensemble or landscape which illustrates (a) significant stage(s) in human history;
5. to be an outstanding example of a traditional human settlement, land-use, or sea-use which is representative of a culture (or cultures), or human interaction with the environment especially when it has become vulnerable under the impact of irreversible change;
6. to be directly or tangibly associated with events or living traditions, with ideas, or with beliefs, with artistic and literary works of outstanding universal significance. (The Committee considers that this criterion should preferably be used in conjunction with other criteria);
7. to contain superlative natural phenomena or areas of exceptional natural beauty and aesthetic importance;
8. to be outstanding examples representing major stages of earth's history, including the record of life, significant on-going geological processes in the development of landforms, or significant geomorphic or physiographic features;
9. to be outstanding examples representing significant on-going ecological and biological processes in the evolution and development of terrestrial, fresh water, coastal and marine ecosystems and communities of plants and animals;
10. to contain the most important and significant natural habitats for in-situ conservation of biological diversity, including those containing threatened species of outstanding universal value from the point of view of science or conservation.

8  Who owns a site once it’s inscribed on the World Heritage List?

The site is the property of the country on whose territory it is located, but it is considered in the interest of the international community to protect the site for future generations. Its protection and preservation becomes a concern of the international World Heritage community as a whole.

9  Partners in the protection of World Heritage

The World Heritage Committee and UNESCO promote a partnership approach to nomination, management and monitoring. Such an approach provides a significant contribution to the protection of World Heritage properties and the implementation of the Convention. Partners in the protection and conservation of World Heritage can be individuals and other stakeholders, especially local communities, indigenous peoples, governmental, non-governmental and private organizations and owners who have an interest and involvement in the conservation and management of a World Heritage property. In 2015, the General Assembly of States Parties adopted a policy to integrate a sustainable development perspective within the processes of the World Heritage Convention.
